LEARN FROM OUR PRESTIGIOUS — AND FUN — FACULTY

UCR's distinguished faculty boasts two Nobel Laureates — Barry C. Barish, who shared the 2017 Physics prize, and Richard R. Schrock, who shared the 2005 Chemistry prize — as well as 12 members of the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine. Honors and awards include 49 National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowships and 19 Guggenheim Fellowships. Leaders in global research, our faculty members are fun, friendly, and passionate about helping students surpass their own achievements.

DIRECT FROM OUR LABS

UCR faculty and researchers are making groundbreaking discoveries every day. Come to UCR and you can not only learn from innovators who are leaders in their fields, you can also have the opportunity work right alongside them! Undergraduate students have the opportunity to work on research projects with our award-winning faculty members.

Improving Robot Movement

UCR's Marlan and Rosemary Bourns College of Engineering doctoral student Zhichao Liu and Konstantinos Karydis, assistant professor of electrical and computer engineering, built a new purely soft-legged robot that can walk smoothly over uneven surfaces without metal springs or cables or requiring any computations to negotiate changes in terrain texture and elevation.

Protecting Citrus Crops Naturally

UCR geneticist Hailing Jin has discovered an effective natural treatment for citrus greening disease (also known as Huanglongbing or HLB), a citrus infestation that results in small, poor-quality fruit that has no value to its growers. Jin's treatment effectively kills the bacterium causing the disease with a naturally occurring molecule, an antimicrobial peptide found in wild citrus relatives.

In Business to Help Farmers

FarmSense is an agricultural smart trap that uses optical sensor technology to monitor insects in the fields, allowing early detection of insect to reduce pesticide use and increase crop yields. FarmSense is also a startup launched at UCR by computer science professor Eamonn Keogh and alumnus Shailendra Singh that was a finalist in the Extreme Tech Challenge global pitch competition hosted virtually in summer 2020.
