DIRECTOR: LAURA RILEY

SDRC provides accommodations, services and resources for students with permanent and temporary disabilities. We also provide outreach, trainings, and programs. We offer consultation for faculty and staff who work with students with disabilities.

Mission Statement

SDRC is committed to an accessible, equitable, and inclusive experience for students with disabilities through advocacy, empowerment, and collaboration with the UCR Community to reduce barriers for all students.

Vision Statement

SDRC strives to be a global leader in equity, accessibility, and the promotion of universal design. The intersectionality of UCR's student population, including disability diversity, will be at the forefront of conversations surrounding an inclusive University experience. We envision a campus community that embraces every aspect of a student's identity, in which all students are welcomed, valued, and empowered to transform the future.

Dedicated to Student Success

SDRC works to reduce or remove barriers to access for students with disabilities so they may focus on learning, participating in campus experiences, and ultimately have the opportunity to graduate. This includes resource referrals, crisis management, disability management, general advising, provision of support programs/workshops, and more.

QUICK FACT

In the early 1960s, UCR became one of the first universities in the nation to make its campus wheelchair accessible and offer services for all students with disabilities. Student Disability Resource Center (formerly called Student Special Services) was founded in 1969.
